

What's been your experience of the NHS or the care system?

Become a Community Conversation host and help make things better

Engage Britain is a new charity that brings people together to tackle our country's biggest challenges.

People across Britain should have more say on the important decisions that affect them. Like what happens to our NHS or how people can get the care they need as they get older.

Because no one knows better what it's like to live in Britain today than you do.

Too many of us feel that we're not involved in these conversations. But Engage Britain wants to change that.

It starts with a simple idea: people talking. Bringing together different views and experiences across our communities, to find out what we all feel is working right now and what isn't.

By sharing these ideas, together we can develop new ways to tackle our greatest challenges. That's why Engage Britain is here - so you are heard.

Host a conversation about health and care in your community

Engage Britain is looking for people across England, Scotland and Wales to host community conversations about health and care from January 2021.

The charity has partnered with Just Ideas and WSA Community Consultants to recruit a diverse group of hosts from across the country.

What you get as a conversation host

- Training in how to organise and run a conversation in person or online
- Free, optional accredited training in how to engage communities
- An involvement fee to support your role running the conversation
- Become part of a network of like-minded people, helping shape health and care decisions

To find out more, please contact us to express your interest in leading a conversation. Drop an email to Graeme Fancourt at graeme@just-ideas.co.uk

Share your full name and the region where you live. He'll get in touch to talk you through the next steps.
